ANNUAL REPORT 2011/2012

Reducing Poverty
Through Job Creation

Case Study:

Self-help group cotton traders, Afghanistan

The Dehqan Self-Help Group (SHG) in the Balkh province in northern Afghanistan has come a long way since its first meeting in 2011. Today, the 20-person group keeps accurate records of their income and expenditure and has learned how to maximize the profits from their cotton crops.

Before Hand in Hand (HiH) Afghanistan came to their village, Markaz Kaldar, the cotton farmers had been struggling to get by growing and selling cotton. Then HiH Afghanistan helped them set up the Dehqan SHG. They learnt the power of acting together, as well as how to save and borrow money from each other. HiH Afghanistan also provided training in bookkeeping and basic business development.

Armed with this new knowledge, the Dehqan group transformed their own farming businesses, started a small cotton trading business and changed their lives. Today, when the cotton price drops, they are no longer forced to sell at a loss. Instead they take a loan from the group savings fund, buy cotton from other farmers and wait for the price to rise before selling.

A word from our Chairman

It is now almost twelve years since I got involved with the fight against poverty through Hand in Hand in southern India. I was fascinated by what I saw of early examples of help to self-help when poor women took their destiny in their own hands and started small enterprises. I also learned about Muhammad Yunus' microcredit in Bangladesh. If thousands of poor people could pull themselves out of poverty – why not millions? Help to self-help was the way forward to eliminate extreme poverty.

The agreement with Dr Kalpana Sankar, the highly successful CEO of Hand in Hand India (HiH India), and her team therefore became: help build small enterprises and create jobs at maximum speed. Today we can look back on over 771,000 mobilized and trained women, 810,000 small enterprises and nearly 1.2 million sustainable jobs. This exciting journey in India has been characterized by speed, low costs, scale and transparency.

From the state of Tamil Nadu in the South we have spread our successful model for job creation to Central and Northern India where now eight states are included. Six years ago we also started in Southern Africa and Afghanistan and two years ago in Kenya. HiH India is now planning expansion into South-East Asia. The reason for moving into all of India and to other regions of the world is to spread our model for job creation and stimulate others to do the same.

Once income is rising from one dollar per day to 3-4-5 dollars through job creation, the demand also rises for services from our other programs: Education, Health, Citizen Centres and the Environment.

I want to thank all donors who are supporting us and the thousands of dedicated employees who make our joint vision come true.

Percy Barnevik

Self-Help Group, Southern Africa

A word from our CEO

There has been significant progress in reducing global poverty over the past couple of decades, particularly in East and South Asia. Global progress has been achieved through systemic improvements in five main areas: governance, social programs, open markets and trade, financial systems and physical infrastructure. Nevertheless, more than a billion people still live below the poverty line. Most of them are in sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia, the regions where Hand in Hand is focusing its work.

The Hand in Hand model complements systemic improvements by helping to connect the poorest and most marginalized people to the opportunities that are being created. The synergies of large-scale systemic improvements and targeted individualized support for self-help are powerful, as can be seen in the impact of Hand in Hand's programs. The Hand in Hand Group's (HiH Group) strength comes from its effective self-help model for job creation, its capable staff and its supportive donors.

By March 2012, the HiH Group had mobilized about 771,000 people into self-help groups (SHGs) and helped to create more than one million jobs, with five million people benefitting from these jobs. The work began in India and Hand in Hand India has delivered the majority of these results. In addition, HiH India helps reduce poverty through its four other "pillar" programs, which build on the SHGs: child labour elimination and education, citizen centre enterprises, environment and health. Well over two million people in India have seen their lives improved through these four complementary programs.

Elsewhere, Hand in Hand's reach is also growing. The job creation programs of Hand in Hand (HiH) Afghanistan, HiH Eastern Africa and HiH Southern Africa are now well established and rapidly expanding. We are also in discussions with potential strategic partners for further expansion into new countries in Africa. And HiH India is preparing new programs in Sri Lanka, Cambodia and other countries in Southeast Asia.

Hand in Hand (HiH) Sweden and HiH International continue to strengthen their collaboration through a common fund raising strategy and joint program reviews. Our Hand in Hand partners are led by strong and inspiring CEOs – Kalpana in India, Sazini in Southern Africa, Pauline in Eastern Africa, Nasry in Afghanistan and Charlotte in Sweden. The CEOs of the HiH Group meet every six months to discuss strategy, share lessons and agree on new partnerships and new country programs.

Donations received by HiH International in its financial year April 2011 – March 2012 increased 30% over the previous year, to USD 10 million. Particularly welcome was a major increase in unrestricted core funding from private and corporate donors, which represented 73% of the total compared to 31% in the previous year. It can be used flexibly for capacity building, start-up of new programs and other priority funding needs of any well-performing partner organization.

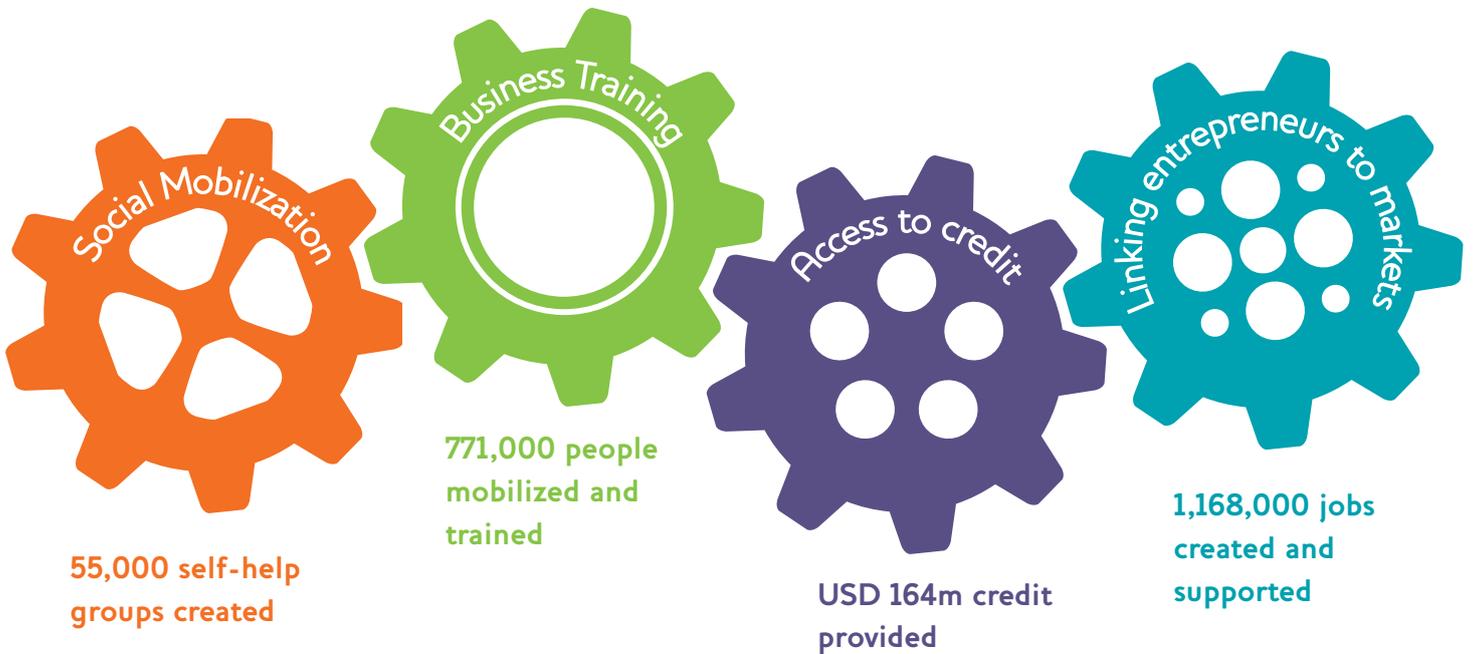

In August 2011, HiH India hosted a newly developed five-day Hand in Hand Social Entrepreneurship Program (SEP), which will take place annually. Professor Kasturi Rangan of Harvard Business School leads the course, which includes a mix of classroom-based learning, field visits and expert panels. The next SEP will be held in Kenya in September 2012, hosted by HiH Eastern Africa.

Looking ahead, more emphasis will be placed on synthesizing knowledge and documenting the Hand in Hand approach, including lessons learned and adaptations made in different country contexts. Such knowledge will increasingly be shared with new partners in new countries who will be encouraged to start job creation programs using the Hand in Hand approach, thereby leveraging our impact and taking us more rapidly towards the ultimate goal of poverty eradication.

Working together we can do great things – the HiH Group shows what can be achieved when great ideas and great institutions are brought together.

Sven Sandström

The Hand in Hand job creation model

Business training in Tamil Nadu, India

Vision

Hand in Hand's vision is to help reduce poverty through job creation.

Mission

Our mission is to reduce poverty through creating sustainable jobs that raise family income. We do so through the social and economic empowerment of the poorest and most marginalized people, the majority of whom are women.

Approach

Hand in Hand believes that micro-entrepreneurs, creating and running small businesses, are key drivers for economic growth and poverty reduction.

The Hand in Hand model focuses on the poorest and most marginalized people in our countries of operations who show the potential and drive to become micro-entrepreneurs. Working with existing community structures and adapted to local circumstances, support is delivered in four main areas:

Social Mobilization

Hand in Hand helps poor men and women form self-help groups. Group members learn about the power of a shared goal and group support, as well as the importance of savings and financial discipline.

Business Training

Once a group has demonstrated stability and financial responsibility, Hand in Hand provides training in how to start, grow and sustain a small business.

Access to Credit

Groups hold joint savings and learn how to manage these. Should financial resources be required beyond group members' own savings, members will be trained in credit management and offered microloans, either directly or through partners.

Linking Entrepreneurs to Markets

Once businesses have been started, Hand in Hand provides support in improving the productivity and competitiveness of members' products and services. Members learn how to add value to their business through better packaging, pricing and branding, quality control, as well as how to access new or bigger markets.

HiH India gave Usha the skills she needed to set up her own business. To begin with she set up a tailoring business. This was so successful she took out another loan and bought a taxi or 'share auto'. Today, Usha runs two businesses, earns INR 6,000 per month (USD 120) and employs her brother as the taxi driver.

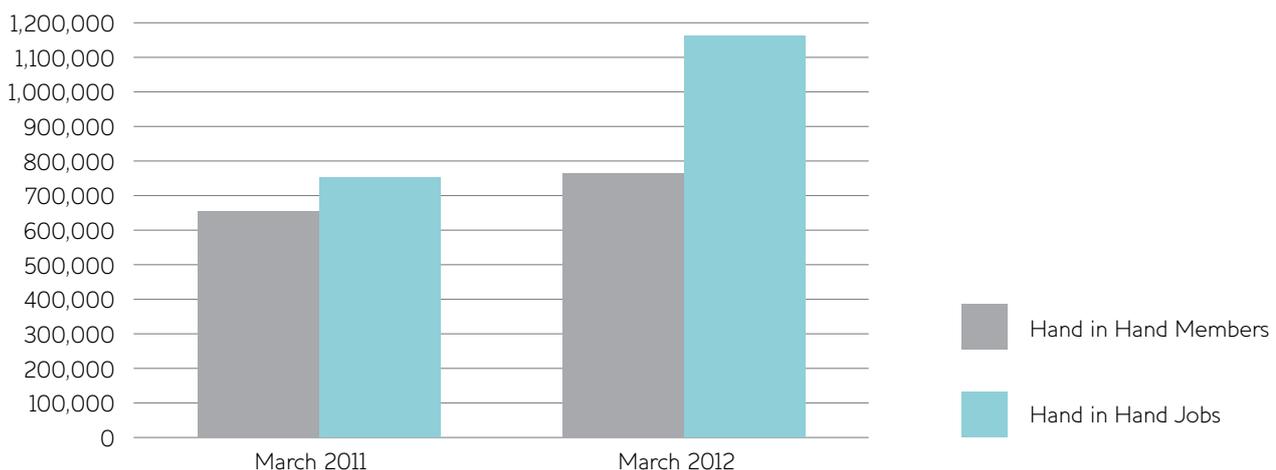

Hand in Hand Group – the year in review

2011/12 has been a year of rapid growth and expansion for the HiH Group. In particular, the number of businesses created and loans extended have grown steadily over the past 12 months.

Each Hand in Hand organization has contributed to this positive, global picture as the details on these two pages show.

Hand in Hand Group results

	Cumulative results through Mar 2011	12-month Apr 2011-Mar 2012 results	Cumulative results through Mar 2012	12-month growth

¹This is the number of jobs reported for the 12-month period, before the results of the independent study by Micro-Credit Ratings International Ltd (M-CRIL) were published. The M-CRIL report estimates that HiH India had helped create or support about 25% more jobs than reported by HiH India, bringing the cumulative results for the HiH Group to 1,167,593² as of end March 2012.

The 12-month percentage growth of 23%³ is the increase in reported numbers excluding the finding of M-CRIL.

From April 2012 HiH India will be using the findings of the M-CRIL report as the new base for reporting job numbers.

Hand in Hand India

HiH India continues to impress and the numbers speak for themselves: more than 90,000 new members engaged in the past year and 160,000 enterprises created, which brings the total number of jobs supported to date to 1,160,000. Work has progressed across all five pillars of operation – self-help groups and job creation, child labour elimination and education, citizen centre enterprises, environment and health. This impressive track record has been accompanied by further geographical expansion beyond India into Sri Lanka and Cambodia. Additionally, in March, HiH India opened a fund raising office in New Delhi to support the planned expansion in northern India. HiH India continues to be a microcredit leader in the market. Despite an extremely challenging economic environment, Belstar, HiH India's sister microfinance institution, provided USD 278 million of credit in 2011/12, bringing the total amount of credit it has extended to USD 52 million.

Hand in Hand Afghanistan

HiH Afghanistan has continued to deliver at pace under challenging circumstances. A new CEO was appointed in February 2012, Mr Abdul Rahim Nasry. Some 3,000 new members have been added during the year now totalling 10,500 active members. At year-end, this had resulted in more than 1,300 micro-businesses generating more than 1,900 new jobs. Expansion continued in the Balkh province, with plans to launch operations in further districts in the coming year. The Knowledge Resource Centre (KRC) in Mazar-e-Sharif continued to operate as a training institute and finalized a series of training modules, trained HiH Afghanistan staff and coordinated mobile training experts. HiH Afghanistan has continued to develop its microfinance program by designing new loan products and plans to continue expanding its lending activities both directly and through partnerships.

Hand in Hand Southern Africa

Based in Johannesburg, HiH Southern Africa is now operating in South Africa, Swaziland and, more recently, Zimbabwe. Plans are afoot to expand in South Africa and into Lesotho. Currently working with some 6,000 members, HiH Southern Africa has created more than 4,700 jobs since its start of operations. The HiH Southern Africa Enterprise Incubation Fund will start operations in 2012 with the preparation of products, policies and procedures for the Fund now at an advanced stage.

Hand in Hand Eastern Africa

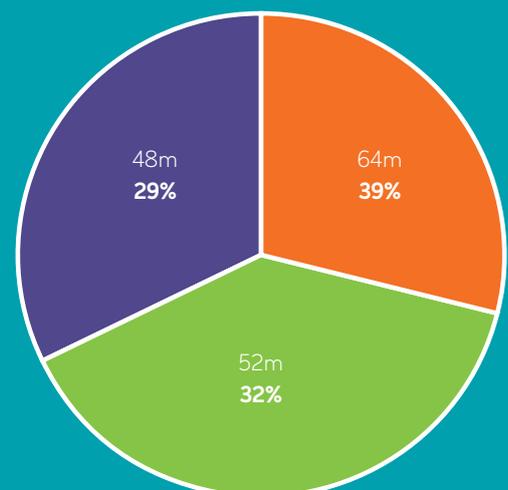

HiH Eastern Africa has completed its first full year of operations with rapid growth and expansion in three Kenyan counties - Nairobi, Kiambu and Machakos. The organization has managed to mobilize more than 12,700 members and created some 5,500 micro-businesses and jobs. HiH Eastern Africa has worked in tandem with the Kenya National Agriculture and Livestock Extension Program (NALEP) to maximize impact on poor farmers and learn from each other. Plans to launch an Enterprise Incubation Fund are now nearing completion. From 2012 onwards, this will provide many poor farmers and entrepreneurs with much needed initial credit.

In 2011, Thandazile joined a self-help group supported by HiH Southern Africa in Swaziland. She learned financial discipline and received business training before taking a loan from the group's savings to establish a piggery, supplying local restaurants and supermarkets.

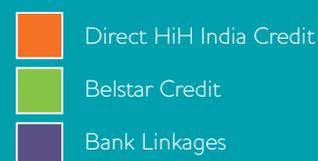

Today her business has an annual turnover of SZL 30,000 (USD 3,500).

India – Total Credit Provided

Total Credit: USD 164m

2012 Highlights

Hand in Hand India creates and sustains more than 1 million jobs.

HiH India has recently announced the results of an independent study conducted by Micro-Credit Ratings International Limited (M-CRIL), an associate of EDA Rural Systems, to validate its job numbers.

Using field surveys, the study involved an in-depth analysis of the credit outreach and utilization, and then the conversion to enterprises and jobs. The study was conducted using stratified random sampling across the districts of HiH India's operations.

M-CRIL estimates that HiH India has helped create and sustain a total of 1.16m jobs since its inception. These findings show very encouraging progress towards HiH India's target of supporting 1.3m jobs by 2014.

HiH India helped form a cooperative to help small dairy producers in Tamil Nadu. The individual producers teamed up to deliver milk to 36 collection centres which were then, in turn, linked to larger commercial milk companies. As a result, the producers have seen the price they can get for their milk increase by 150%.

Agricultural Entrepreneurs in India

The hugely successful two and a half year project funded by FMO*, the Dutch entrepreneurial development bank, and the Stichting af Jochnick Foundation, to provide training for agricultural entrepreneurs in southern India, draws to a close in 2012.

Thanks to a total donation of USD 2.2m, HiH India has been able to fill knowledge gaps and promote products and processes to increase productivity and profit margins among 140,000 female rural entrepreneurs. The technical training provided by HiH India focuses on modern farming techniques in areas such as soil preparation, use of organic manure, pest control, harvesting and animal husbandry.

The success of this project is due to the development of an informal cooperative movement whereby innovative agricultural value-chains, crucial to the future growth and sustainability of micro-enterprises, have been established. These value chains, fostered by HiH India, are a direct result of the comprehensive training program, which combines training and innovation in agricultural techniques with the development of business and marketing skills. This systemic-level change will continue to benefit communities long after the end of the project.

Dr Kalpana Sankar, CEO HiH India: "This has been one of the most fascinating and rewarding projects which we have had the honour to be involved in. The knowledge gained and the best practices established will benefit poor, rural communities for years to come".

Johnson & Johnson Corporate Citizenship Trust

In May 2011 the Johnson & Johnson Corporate Citizenship Trust announced it is committing GBP 250,000 over three years to support the work of Hand in Hand in Afghanistan.

The project funded by the Johnson & Johnson Corporate Citizenship Trust will provide 1,000 micro-entrepreneurs in Balkh province with the support they need to strengthen and expand their own businesses. This support includes help to improve product quality and support in identifying and accessing larger markets.

Through the Trust's support, HiH Afghanistan will also train 7,500 rural families in basic sanitation and hygiene methods, increasing their awareness of the importance of proper sanitation and hygiene for one's health and, thus, quality of life.

Name: Zainab | Family: Five children | Business: Farming | Income: 6,000Afs (USD 120) per month

“We are delighted to be working with Hand in Hand in Afghanistan. We believe that encouraging economic development and the empowerment of women is critical to improve the lives of families across the region. Hand in Hand’s holistic approach of working with communities to tackle poverty through education, microfinance, health information and services fit with our long term and sustainable approach to improving human health.”

Frank Welvaert, Managing Director
Johnson & Johnson Corporate Citizenship Trust

To date, the program has given 1,370 members business mentoring and skills training. Many have then gone on to strengthen or expand micro-enterprises in Balkh province.

More than 2,600 people have also received sanitation and hygiene education covering personal, family and environmental hygiene, nutrition and first aid medical response. To maximize the impact and reach out to a broader audience, the training was supplemented by a public awareness campaign to spread the information throughout the community.

During its first year of operations HiH Eastern Africa has supported the formation of over 630 self-help groups (SHGs) with a total of more than 12,700 members. The strength, depth and effectiveness of the Hand in Hand model is seen in the rapid creation of some 5,500 micro-businesses and jobs to date.

Thanks to NALEP, Cathrine has already learned how to get the best from her maize crop and is looking forward to a good harvest and plentiful supply of maize for her family.

Inspired by the business training from HiH Eastern Africa, Cathrine now also has a business plan. She has taken a loan from the SHG so that she can build up her farming business to include chickens, a goat and a dairy cow.

The partnership between HiH Eastern Africa and NALEP has led to increased support for many agricultural entrepreneurs like Cathrine.

Sida and NALEP

Hand in Hand Eastern Africa has just completed the first year of its partnership with NALEP.

In late 2010 the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (Sida)/the Swedish Embassy in Nairobi, together with the Dutch entrepreneurial development bank (FMO*) provided seed funding for the establishment of HiH Eastern Africa. In April 2011, HiH Eastern Africa rolled out its program in partnership with the National Agriculture and Livestock Extension Program (NALEP).

HiH Eastern Africa's role in the partnership is to provide business and financial management training to farmers, helping them to develop their small-holdings into viable businesses. Skills training, support in value-addition and how to identify and access markets, have stimulated business development.

Bernard Mwangangi, Agribusiness and Marketing Coordinator, from NALEP said, "HiH Eastern Africa has made a significant contribution to the level of training given to smallholder farmers in Kenya and this has had a direct impact on the number of people able to start their own micro-enterprise and increase their family income".

Japhet Kiara, Senior Program Manager, Agriculture and Rural Development, from Sida/the Swedish Embassy, Nairobi, said "We are very happy to have facilitated the collaboration between HiH International and NALEP. We are convinced that Hand in Hand's integrated approach to job creation offers a valuable complement to NALEP's initiatives in Kenya, as has already been demonstrated through the impressive commendable results achieved during the first year of our partnership."

* The Capacity Development program is managed by FMO on behalf of the Dutch Government.

Hand in Hand Social Entrepreneurship Program

The HiH Social Entrepreneurship Program (SEP) is a five-day course taught by Professor Kasturi Rangan of Harvard Business School that explains how social enterprise can empower people, enhance livelihoods and create jobs.

The first course was held in Tamil Nadu, India, in partnership with HiH India. The SEP combines: classroom teaching; field visits to see the work of both Hand in Hand and partners; and expert Q&As with leading social entrepreneurs. The course showcases the role of job creation and social enterprises in poverty reduction.

The course is organized together with Socient Associates, a Boston-based consulting company, led by Professor Kasturi Rangan, the founding co-chair of the Harvard Business School Social Enterprise Initiative. In 2012, in partnership with HiH Eastern Africa, it moves to Limuru, just outside Nairobi in Kenya.

2011 HiH Social Entrepreneurship Program, Tamil Nadu, India

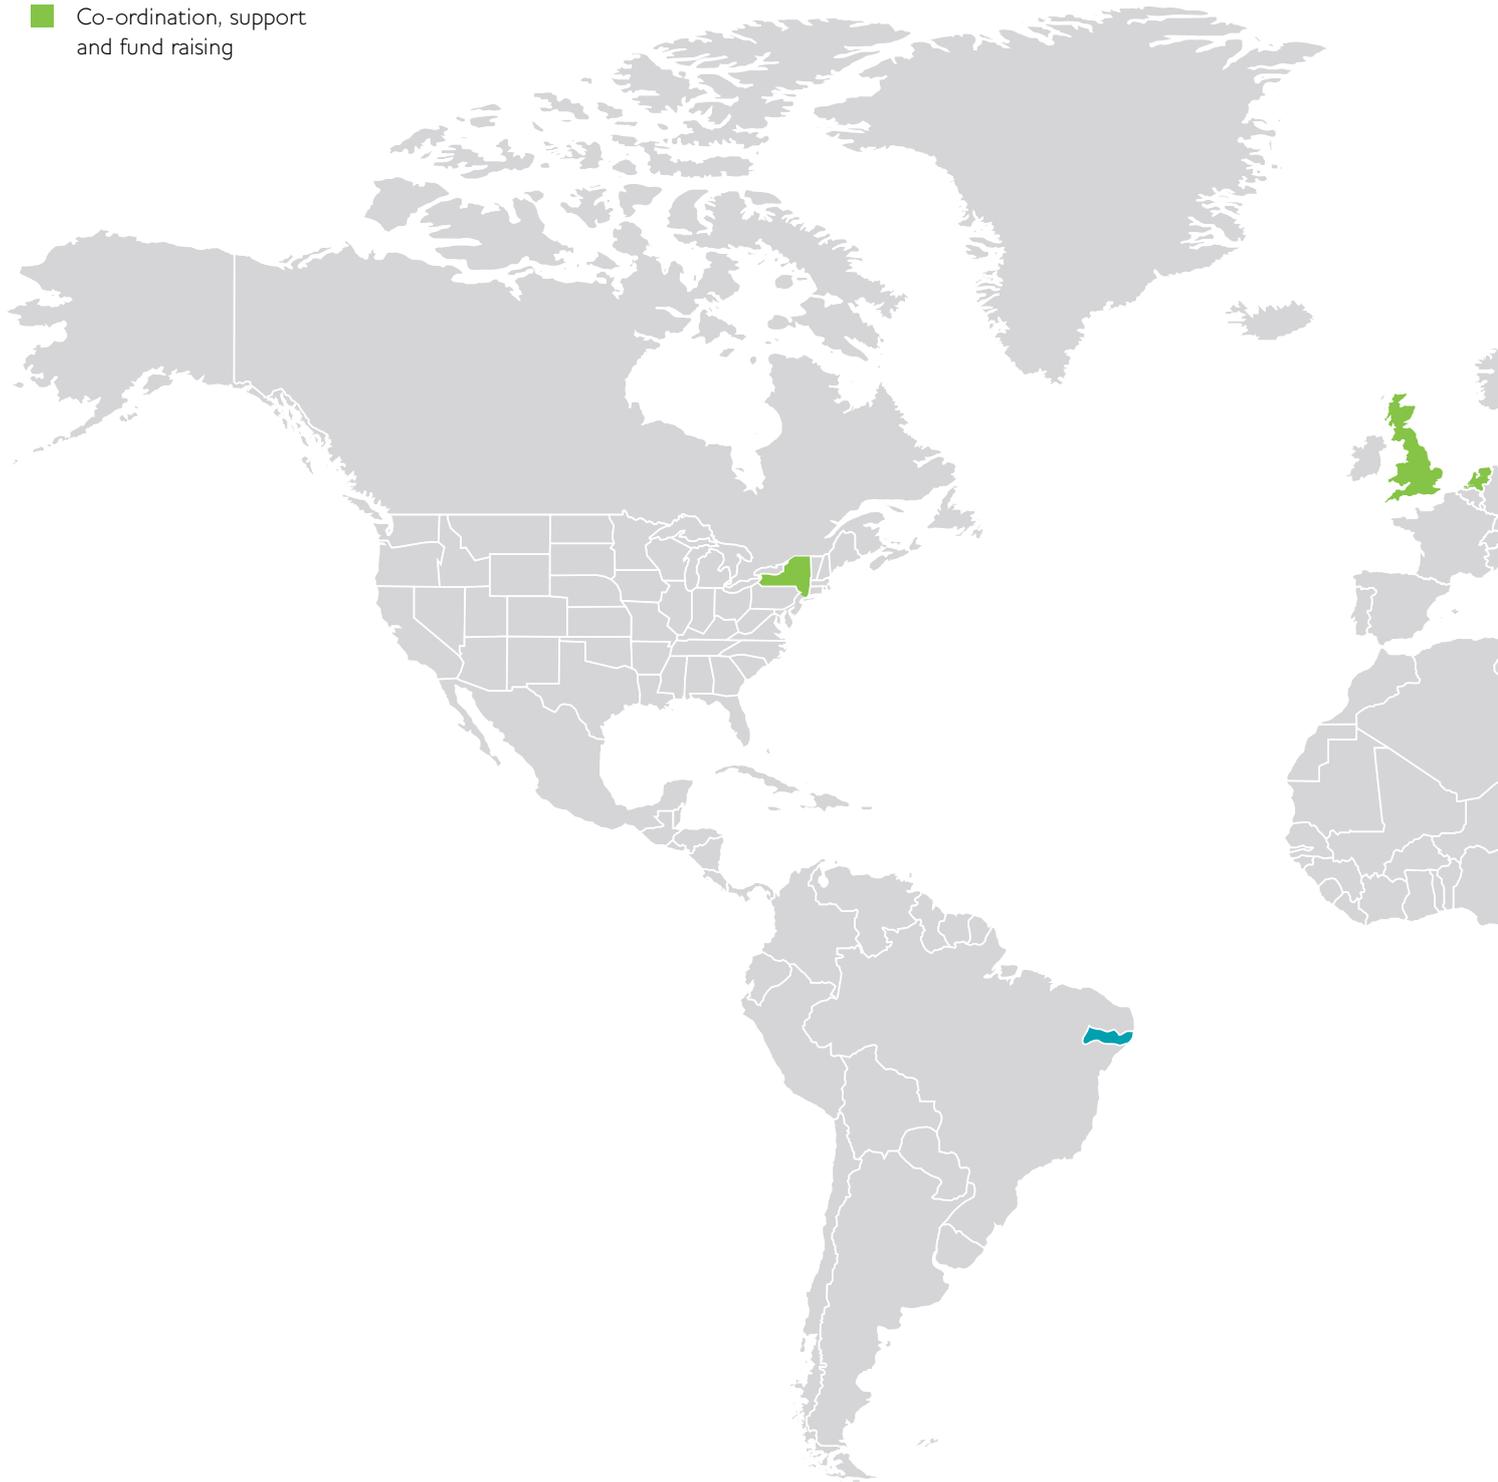

The first course took place at the Great Lakes Institute of Management in Tamil Nadu in August 2011. It was run in partnership with HiH India and Socient Associates.

41 participants took part from 20 countries and from a diverse range of organizations, including donors, Micro-Finance Institutions, international NGOs and companies.
